

Artist statement:

This image documented the daily life of an old man. His work shows the public how he makes a living. The old man is sitting on one side of the street and selling the goods. My image indicates the conventional way of the culture, and it also represents real life in a farm market in a small town. It is not that obvious in many places, but it shows the variety of life and the tradition. By focusing on daily life, overlooked moments, and showing others that I can see different people's lives, it also makes me think about how my life goes differently.
